Cranium Cracker

An auto tourist at a cross-roads store bought some provisions, eating in all $12.50, for which he handed the storekeeper a $10 bill and a $5 bill.

As the storekeeper did not have the change, he sent his clerk to a garage next door to get the $5 bill changed, and gave the customer his $2.50 change. Then the tourist bought $1.50 worth of fruit, paying for it out of the change given him.

After the tourist had gone, it developed that both bills were counterfeit, and the tourist could not be found.

When the storekeeper had given the garage man a good $5 bill for the counterfeit one he changed, how much had he lost in all?

Arkansas Bankers Meet in Annual Session at Hot Springs

Warns of State Credit HOT SPRINGS, Ark.—(AP)—Arkansas bankers were urged Thursday to preclude to ordinary citizens that strict adherence to the state's 1934 highway bond refunding contract "is not only good morals but good business for the State of Arkansas."

James H. Fenick, Little Rock, retiring president of the Arkansas Bankers association, made this suggestion in a speech prepared for delivery at the association's annual convention here.

Mr. Spencer, president of the First National Bank at Hope, is expected to be elected president of the Arkansas State Bankers' Association to succeed James H. Fenick of Little Rock, at Friday's sessions of the convention at Hot Springs. He has served as the state association's vice president the past year.

Bankers Convene HOT SPRINGS, Ark.—The executive council of the Arkansas Bankers association held a brief business session Wednesday night as a prelude to the 48th annual convention which was to be called to order Thursday morning by President J. H. Fenick of Little Rock.

Robert E. Wait, secretary, was the guest at noon of Dave Burgener of the Arkansas Trust company, and addressed members of the Rotary Club. Mr. Wait said that only routine business was transacted by the executive council.

In addition to the address of the president, there are three other speakers on tomorrow's program, with the annual golf tournament scheduled for the afternoon. The "Unemployment Compensation Act" will be discussed by Eli Collins of Little Rock; "Your Federal Reserve Bank," by F. Guy Hitt of St. Louis, and "Our Bankers' Seminar" by E. P. Fayetteville.

Arkansas members of the American Bankers Association will meet at noon to elect officers. Mr. Collins will be toastmaster at the annual banquet tomorrow night.

The highest of Friday's session will be the address of Gov. Carl E. Bailey. His subject will be "Political Credit." The junior bankers section also will be given official recognition Friday morning. A banking symposium will be another feature with addresses by E. J. White of the Bank of West Memphis and L. C. Cargile, State National Bank, Texarkana. Officers will be elected Friday.

Landscape Meet at Local Station

First of Kind in State to Be Held Here at 2 p. m. Tuesday

A special landscape meeting will be held at the University of Arkansas College of Agriculture, Fruit and Truck Branch Experiment Station Tuesday afternoon, May 31, at 2 o'clock, for all south Arkansas counties, states G. W. Ware, assistant director in charge of the station.

This is the first such meeting held in the state, and large numbers of visitors are expected to attend under the leadership of their home demonstration agents, and landscape and garden club leaders.

A very timely program has been arranged on the spacious grounds of the station. P. T. Ecton, extension horticulturist, will give a lecture and demonstration on plant arrangement, fertilization, cultivation, and disease and insect control for ornamental plants. R. S. Woodward, technical assistant on the station will demonstrate the propagating, setting, and growing of shrubs.

Talks of special interest will be made by Mrs. W. D. Cammack, president of the garden clubs of Arkansas, and Miss Elin Fuses, district agent, agricultural extension service.

This short and timely meeting will deal with the more practical phases of landscaping. Everything will be demonstrated with actual models—shrubs, flowers, lawns, walks, rose gardens, fish pools, and many special features.

The grounds of the Fruit and Truck Branch Experiment Station provide a very desirable setting for a meeting of this nature, and all interested persons are cordially invited to be present.

Peace Officers to Conclude Meeting

Delegates From All Sections of Arkansas Attend Convention

The Arkansas Peace Officers and the Sheriff's Association convention entered its second day's session Thursday with the arrival of additional delegates which promised to make the Hope meeting one of the most successful in the history of the organization.

More than 100 enforcement officers attended the opening day's session Wednesday which was climaxed with a public dance at Elks hall that night.

Several brief speeches were heard on the Thursday morning program.

At noon a fish fry was held at Fair park, attended by the officers, their families and guests.

Target practice and other entertainment was scheduled for the afternoon. The convention was to be concluded late in the day.

John L. Wilson, chairman of the courthouse removal committee, said that a large number of people in Hempstead county object to the removal of the Court House from Washington to Hope, because they fear that as soon as the election is over, the records will be moved to temporary quarters in Hope, to be held until a new courthouse is built.

"I have also heard that it is planned to rent some temporary quarters at an excessive price to store these records, so at the last meeting of the Court House Removal Committee, of which I am a member, I had introduced the following resolution, which was unanimously approved:

"We, the members of the Court House Removal Committee, wish to go on record as follows:

"Until the new courthouse is built, we will not favor removing the records to Hope or causing any additional expense to the county for temporary quarters."

Hit Hopkins for Dictating Votes

Wheeler, Clark Assail Relief Head for "Meddling" in Iowa

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Harry L. Hopkins' intervention in Iowa politics created a furious storm Wednesday in the senate, where Senator Wheeler (Dem., Mont.) said that the relief administrator might "just as well have put a slip in the pay envelope of every Iowa relief worker" telling him how to vote.

Wheeler referred to Hopkins' action in expressing preference for Representative Wearin (Dem., Ia.) over Senator Gillette (Dem., Ia.) both running in the senatorial primary. Senator Gillette was an opponent of the supreme court reorganization bill.

Senator Clark (Dem., Mo.) said the Hopkins statement was the same as saying to relief workers: "If you don't vote for Wearin, you'll lose your jobs. If you vote for Gillette your families may go hungry."

Clark, Wheeler and Gillette joined in demanding that Hopkins withdraw his remark in view of his official position.

"It's the only manly thing he can do," Clark told the senate.

Gillette said that Hopkins should "correct the position in which he has, perhaps unwittingly, placed the president and national Relief Administration."

Wheeler, warning all other administration leaders against mixing in state primary elections, said he would keep the public informed of every attempt along this line, by using the Senate floor as a sounding board.

"I can't be said the administration does not know about it," Wheeler said. "The administration is going to have to take full responsibility for statements by Ickes, Hopkins, Wallace and Farley."

Wheeler said the American people "resent" every attempt to use "relief funds to play politics or pay political debts" and he would see they were fully informed. He asserted that relief funds apparently were to be used to defeat senators "because someone

Militarists Take Over New Powers in Japs' Cabinet

Probably New and Stronger Effort to Win Victory in China

FRONT IS EXTENDED

Japs Advance in China, But Peace Beckons in Czechoslovakia

TOKYO, Japan.—(AP)—Japan's foreign, war and finance ministers left the cabinet Thursday in a drastic reorganization by which the Army appeared to have won a stronger grip on the government, with the likelihood that there now will be made a new and stronger effort to end the China conflict with a quick victory.

The changes bring into the cabinet three of Japan's most powerful military leaders, two of them retired.

The Japanese armies reported Thursday they had established bases for a frontal attack on two other cities of the central front, west of Suchow, along the Lunghai railway—the cities of Kweiichang and Laifeng.

Forty Japanese bombing planes continued on the villages and walled towns south of Lunghai.

Womack Is Silent On His Dismissal

Former College President Says Comment Might Stir Fight

ARKADELPHIA, Ark.—J. P. Womack, ousted president of Henderson State Teachers college Thursday still maintained silence regarding Tuesday's action of the board of trustees who met in this city.

He said any comment on that action might stir up controversy harmful to the institution and he wanted Henderson to continue the phenomenal progress that has marked its growth since it became a state college in 1929.

Womack said he had hoped to remain president a few years longer and then to have turned the job over to a younger man, and that he might have remained a resident of Arkansas and continued to advise and assist in any way he could. As it is, he said he will have to move and he has no place to go as yet.

Students at Henderson are in the midst of final examinations and the action of the board is believed to have been discussed very little by them. Only the senior class has left following Monday's commencement exercises.

Student leaders replied to questions that the vast majority of the students were satisfied with Womack as president. The students recreation cabin on the campus is a gift of President and Mrs. Womack.

Cecil Cupp, Arkadelphia member of the board of trustees, authorized to issue a statement by the board after it adjourned late Tuesday, gave out the following statement:

"Henderson State Teachers college board of trustees in its annual meeting voted to dispense with the services of President J. P. Womack, effective June 1, 1938. The board in official action turned over the active management of the institution to Business Manager Grady Smith until a new president can be selected to take Mr. Womack's place. No other business except minor routine matters were transacted. It is presumed a new president will be elected during the summer months."

Cupp individually would give no statement Wednesday. He said that the trustees and other officials and supporters were appreciative of the work that has been done by Womack to advance the school to its present high standards. He said, however, that under the circumstances the majority of the board thought it was acting for the best interest of the institution and that the action was designed to eliminate the discord that has existed.

Too Many Toes to Watch

EVERY since the moving picture graduated from its old nickelodeon status and became a big league entertainer, serious folk have been waiting impatiently for it to grow up. Once in a while, to be sure, something like "Snow White" comes along to indicate that the movies have indeed grown up—in spots, anyhow. But for the most part the industry's long adolescence continues, and signs of maturity are regrettably few.

It was a big league movie producer—none other than Samuel Goldwyn—who put his finger on the reason for this.

MR. GOLDWYN announced the other day that he was going to make a film dramatizing the exiling of the Jews from Germany. This promptly raised a storm of protests from the other movie barons, who objected that the American movie business in Germany would be ruined. So Mr. Goldwyn replied:

"Why should Sam Goldwyn wait 200 years to make a picture of the most dramatic thing that has happened in this generation.

If the movies are to make any claim to maturity at all, the only possible answer to such a question is: 'He shouldn't.' Yet the peculiar conditions under which movies are produced make it almost impossible for such an answer to be returned.

For Hollywood makes movies for all the world. It has to guard its foreign markets with the most zealous care. And if it makes a picture that offends a totalitarian government—as, for instance, in Germany—it runs the risk of facing quota restrictions or other reprisals which will cut off a sizeable part of its profits.

Consequently the industry has had to surrender its independence. It may not offend anyone; as a result, it must fight shy of all the great, living issues which are absorbing the world today. And as long as it does that, it cannot pretend to have reached maturity.

NOW Mr. Goldwyn apparently is going to try breaking this rule. He proposes, as he says, to "make a film like the newspaper prints the news," telling a dramatic story as he sees it without worrying about the toes that get stepped on in the process; and every movie-goer should hope that he remains firm in his resolution.

The movies will some day be one of the most tremendously important cultural and educational agencies on earth. They will offer an entertainment that is living, breathing, truly adult.

But they won't be and do those things until they find some way of shaking off the restrictions imposed by their slavery to the foreign market.

Let's See You Work

"OBSERVATION in the field" as the greater part of the business student's course of study is an idea that's attracting the attention of modern educators. The dean of one business college suggests that teachers themselves would do well to take advantage of this method as a means of realistic business research.

The dean points out that the study of statistics is merely the study of results, while the study of the business man in his lair is the study of the statistics' causes.

Something, certainly, of considerable moment is going to come out of this thing.

If the studies are to be of any value at all, the paragons of the business world aren't going to be the only specimens examined. And one of two things is likely to happen: either a great many sharp dealers are going to be forced to do some hasty housecleaning, or the next generation of business men is going to have an extraordinary number of sharp dealers of exceptional talent.

Or maybe what's going to happen is an unprecedented boom in the mental sanitarium business.

The Place of Fat in the Diet

Fat is one of the important ingredients in our diet, which includes proteins, carbohydrates, fats, mineral salts and vitamins. Fats constitute a concentrated source of energy, because they are high in carbon and hydrogen, low in water as compared with carbohydrates and proteins, and, in most instances, completely digestible.

This fact is important in working out diets for those who can only take small amounts of food. Fats help to stave off hunger. It has also been said that a diet which is high in carbohydrate and low in fat will lead to excessive fermentation in the intestines with resultant discomfort.

Nutritionists still differ as to what should be the optimum amount of fat in the diet. For the average person, fats should provide one-third of the total intake of calories. However, for people with occupations requiring a great deal of muscular energy the amount of fat needed is much greater than for the office worker or housewife.

Apparently fats contain some substances which are necessary for health. Fats differ in their qualities exactly as do various proteins.

Some of the vitamins which we require are found chiefly in fats; namely, vitamins A, D, and E. But certain fats, as, for example, the fat of pork and the vegetable oils, do not contain these vitamins in large amounts, as do the fish liver oils, such as the cod liver oil and halibut liver oil. We choose our foods for many different reasons; probably, chiefly because we like them. Sometimes the price factor is important. Some people actually choose foods in relation to their special food values.

The choice of food on the basis of calories alone would be an error. Fats should be chosen not for their calories alone, but for special qualities which are important in health. In choosing materials in the diet for purposes of supplying fat and energy, it is well to remember that one part, by weight, of either carbohydrate or protein.

The special committee of the Canadian Medical Association has made the following listing of foods in the diet in relationship to the amount of fats that they contain:

Low in fat (less than 2 per cent): vegetables, most fruits, cereals, bread, egg whites, buttermilk.

Medium fat content (2 to 10 per cent): cream soups, milk, veal, chicken, turkey, lean beef, crab meat.

Rich in fat (above 10 per cent): butter and other fats and oils, salmon, tuna, lamb, pork, duck, goose, egg yolks.

Trial Flight

CHAPTER XXIV

THE telegram that Jackie had received was from Beryl. It stated that she was returning at once and that she was bringing with her a famous surgeon in whom she had the greatest confidence.

"I told her it was no use," Roger said. "Dr. Watson ought to know his stuff—what can any other doctor do? But you know how Beryl is—she seems to take the blame for all this on herself—she simply won't give up."

"She's a wonderful person," Jackie said. "Poor Beryl . . . of course she was taking it on herself. Hadn't she told Jackie that if anything serious happened to Roger she never would forgive herself? But as for giving up, well Jackie would not do that either. She would never surrender the hope that Roger would be made well, that he would walk again. Maybe her faith, her prayers, would help in this as they had before."

The surgeon and Beryl arrived that next morning. Beryl herself had piloted the ship back. She had felt that there was no time to lose. Jackie never knew to what lengths she had gone to persuade this great doctor to accompany her, what amount of money she must have paid to secure his services. She did know that Beryl would have spent her entire fortune, gladly, if that could have made Roger well.

"Do you really think there is any chance?" Jackie asked Beryl during the long hours of waiting that the two spent together. Perhaps it would have been easier, for Roger at least, not to have been given this new spark of hope if it would blaze but a brief moment only to sputter and burn into dead ashes of despair again.

BERYL did not answer at once; perhaps she was thinking the same thing. For if the verdict this time was that Roger never would be able to walk, then hope would indeed be dead.

"There is—just a chance," she said. "It lies in the fact that Roger was able to crawl all that distance after the plane crashed. You see he couldn't have done that if his back had been injured as Doctor Watson believed it was."

It was when I told this to Doctor Vendetti that he consented to take Roger's case. But he would not hold out much hope, even then. "Well, we will!" Jackie returned stubbornly. It was simply impossible to accept the fact that Roger would never walk again. It was a miracle now that he was alive, a miracle brought about by courage and faith and love. If one miracle could be achieved by such power as was contained in these three things, why not another?

Miracles do happen, sometimes more than once. And who knows but what it is love and faith and courage, though they be intangible things, that bring them about? Jackie could not have answered these questions; perhaps no one could. But Doctor Vendetti, great surgeon that he was, decided, after he had made his examination, that an operation might bring this miracle about. And Doctor Vendetti added that he would have to rely in part on those same intangible powers.

"There is a chance," the great surgeon told Jackie and Beryl. "that this operation will fix this boy's back. But we must all have great faith, great courage, if we are to help make him well."

"You mean," Beryl asked, her dark eyes returning the great doctor's keen, piercing look, "that there is also the chance that Roger may not be able to pull through—if you operate?"

The great man inclined his head. "Is this the only way?" Jackie protested. "Unless you operate, Roger can never walk again."

"Even then it is only a chance," the doctor said sternly. "Since there is no one else to make this decision I must leave it up to you."

BERYL turned to Jackie. "You are the one," she said. "If Doctor Vendetti doesn't operate, Roger will live—but he'll never walk. If the operation is successful Roger may not only walk, but maybe he will even fly again!"

Jackie did indeed have to summon all her courage, all her faith and love. If her love had not been bigger than these, bigger than any thing else in the world, she could not have answered as she did. "I would like you to perform the operation, Doctor Vendetti," she said. "I know that that is what Roger would want me to say . . . for him."

Doctor Vendetti inclined his head again, before he turned on his heel and strode briskly out of the hospital waiting room. But his keen eyes had paid Jackie tribute for her brave decision.

The operation was performed that same day. There was no point in postponement. Jackie wondered how the sun could so shine so gayly in the town's little square, how life could go on, as usual, while Roger lay unconscious, still, on an operating table in the little hospital at the mercy of a surgeon's knife in the unseen hands of a greater power.

If Roger died, if he never came out of that strange sleep, she—Jackie, who loved him so—would feel that her hands, too, had broken the delicate thread that held his life.

HAD she been right in believing that Roger would not want to live unless he could walk again? Roger who had lived among the clouds, who had piloted a silver ship high up above this world in the stratosphere.

But Roger did not die. Doctor Vendetti and those intangible powers performed that second miracle. The operation was successful. Roger not only would live, but some day would walk again.

"It will take time now," the great surgeon told Jackie gravely, as he bid her goodbye, for Beryl was to fly him back East again. "You must still stand by, my dear, and help this boy fight through. It will be a long, slow, tedious battle, but the victory will be so triumphant that it will be worth while in the end. Weeks yet in bed, months in a wheel chair, crutches at first after that. But your young man will learn to walk again. And yes," the keen eyes smiled into Jackie's, "one day he may even fly again, too!"

This was the news that Jackie could give Roger when he regained consciousness again. She would be by his side when he called her name, she would stand by, help him fight through, teach him to walk again.

That was a big enough job for any woman, enough to fill one's life. Jackie did not want to do anything more important than that. Gladly, gratefully she would dedicate her life to this.

"Your young man is calling for you now," a nurse beckoned to Jackie. "Will you follow me, please."

Yes, Jackie would follow—follow her love for all eternity, with a heart that beat not only with courage and faith, but with such love as can indeed conquer the stratosphere.

THE END.

Paul Harrison in Hollywood

Robert Cummings, Actor, Flyer, Festival Pooh-Bah.

HOLLYWOOD.—Among the odd jobs that movie players have to perform is the making of personal appearances at all sorts of civic occasions. They help lay cornerstones and christen police launches and inaugurate "weeks" and welcome visiting celebrities and ride with Santa Claus down Hollywood Boulevard at holiday time.

By no means are all of these civic occasions local. California is full of fruit and flower festivals, and whenever a community wants to take down its hair and celebrate a harvest with revelry and speeches, it always wants a movie star to help with the hoopla.

His Heart's In It. When the town of Lindsay (population, 4000) had its Orange Blossom Festival recently, it drew Robert Cummings.

Several factors made him an admirable choice as carnival king. For one thing, he's a vegetarian and is crazy about oranges. For another, he is wearing a full beard for his part in "The Texans," and this shagginess harmonized perfectly with the mustachios grown and Spanish costumes worn by the gents of Lindsay. The personable Mr. Cummings also is blessed with a phenomenal memory for names and faces. Having once shaken hands with about half the people in town, he thereafter greeted them unerringly by name. Drinking nothing harder than the lightest wine, he wound up the celebration in a vertical and articulate condition.

Best of all, perhaps, was the fact, apparent to everybody, that Cummings himself was having a swell time. The graciousness of most Hollywoodsmen wears a little thin after a day of pageantry and feasting and autograph signing.

High Life. Your correspondent can testify to these things because he went along for the ride. The ride—100 miles each way—was to have been taken in the actor's airplane, and the town of Lindsay had moved and smoothed off its airport for a happy landing. But Hollywood was stormbound, so we drove up.

Next day there was a parade, with floats and with Cummings riding with the Orange Blossom Queen. I rode with Mrs. Cummings, who was Vivian Janis on Broadway. After that there was a coronation, with the actor doing the crowning. In the evening they had a big dinner at the hotel, and a lot of local talent entertained afterward. Cummings made impromptu speeches, chatted on the radio, and served as master-of-ceremonies of the evening show.

When we left, with a couple of bushels of oranges poured around us for ballast, Cummings promised he'd come back and try that newly moved airport.

A Changed Man. Both he and his wife are flyers, and the actor actually attributes his dramatic success to aviation. Says it gave him ambition.

Once he had learned to fly, in an old crate which he and some other college students bought and wired together, he found that he just had to own a plane. That meant he had to have a lot of money in a hurry. So he became an actor instead of a mining engineer.

He discovered, though, that while

Mr. Merchant and family of Spring Hill were also guests of the Grays over the week-end.

There was a great demand on Broadway for English actors, nobody wanted to hire a young man from Joplin, Mo. So Cummings borrowed a little money, went to England, studied British manners and mannerisms, bought some tweeds, and arranged to have his assumed name billed in lights on a vacant theater.

The billing read: "Blade Stanhope Conway in CANDIDA," and it remained just long enough for a photographer to take pictures of the marquee. Those pictures, along with some of himself, were mailed to Broadway managers, and when Cummings followed them to New York he found plenty of stage roles awaiting him.

By the time he came to Hollywood, however, English actors were out of style. He had to assume a Texas drawl and background to be accepted by King Vidor for a part in "So Red the Rose."

Since then he has appeared in 14 flickers, and now has all the airplanes he wants.

Inhibition Is Permanent Traffic Cop of Emotions

(No. 100) Inhibitions can be friends or enemies. Let us call them traffic cops, as they are the policemen of the mind. Suppose all the traffic laws said "Twenty miles an hour," and you drove at that pace for years.

Then suddenly one day the state decreed, "Drive any way you think safe. Speed up to forty miles an hour." You could never do it happily. Your high-still minge, try as you would, would stay around twenty-five. You might give up driving all together.

In the same way, inhibitions ingrained in children will last always, if only to make them feel guilty when they aren't living up to them. Children as a rule are inhibited by fair and sensible laws. Some of the hold-backs on conduct are put there by nature. Most of us are born with a rather odd balance between desire and restraint. So between the things children are taught to think right and the natural cautions, they get along fairly well. And later, as adults, they manage nicely, also.

But mark the word "balance." When habits of repression are so strong that they eclipse the freedom of will altogether, then one loses ability to select, even when it ought to mean greater happiness.

Parents sometimes place overemphasis on things important to them but that have little real moral value. Inhibitions once firmly set can never be overridden without twinges of guilty conscience. The growing child who has been told repeatedly that it is wicked to dance, may dance when it is older, it is true, but he may have a fight with himself every time he does a two-step. The boy who is told that it is wrong to look at a girl, may never marry, or possibly feel guilty if he does.

The girl who is conditioned to plain appearance and no furbelows, with the idea that frivolity is indecent, may try later to fix herself up, but she will never feel comfortable. It may effect her normal conduct and charm.

Inhibitions, therefore, dear mother, should be based on sensible values. They should be normal and moral. Morality, of course, is sometimes cloaked in false colors. I think, however, that the intelligent parent knows

Muffins, in Maple, Culinary "Interior Decorator"

Life in summer needs a lot of spice. And cinnamon fills the bill. Pass a tray of fragrant hot cinnamon rolls under the unhappy face of a tired father, and watch the smiles reappear quickly.

Quick Cinnamon Rolls
(16 to 18 small rolls)
Two cups flour, 3 teaspoons baking powder, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 4 tablespoons shortening, 3/4 cup milk, 2 tablespoons melted butter, 1/2 cup brown sugar, 1 teaspoon cinnamon.

Prepare muffin pans by spreading quickly with a creamy mixture made by creaming together 3 tablespoons butter and 6 tablespoons brown sugar. Sift flour, baking powder and salt together. Cut in shortening. Add milk, stirring only until dough holds together. Turn out on slightly floured board and knead lightly for 1/2 minute. Roll out to 1/4 inch thickness. Brush with melted butter, sprinkle with brown sugar and cinnamon. Roll jellyroll fashion and cut into 1-inch slices. Place slices cut side down in muffin pans. Bake in moderately hot oven (425 degrees F.) 20 to 25 minutes. Let stand in pan for a minute before turning out. Serve hot or cold.

For another touch of warm and fragrant sweetness, all on a summer day, try these.

Maple Muffins
(16 Muffins)
Two eggs, 1/2 cup milk, 1/4 cup maple syrup, 1/2 cup melted butter or other shortening, 2 cups flour, 3 teaspoons baking powder, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon maple sugar.

Beat eggs with the milk, syrup and butter. Sift the flour, baking powder and salt into the wet mixture, stirring just enough to remove the lumps—about 25 to 30 strokes. Pour into well-greased glass custard cups. Sprinkle

Hot cinnamon rolls, quickly made, will seem like a fragrant tray of plenty on a summer day.

MANY COW TROUBLES CAUSED BY TOO LITTLE VITAMIN A IN FEED

Gray Summit, Mo.—Just as lady checks on the calves that put on pounds where they interfere with the realization of a perfect figure, so is a cow's ment built to keep her in good form.

Dogs, foxes, and poultry of all kind, have for a long time enjoyed the benefits of extra vitamin A in their feed. Just recently the dry cow has come into her right to a vitamin-balanced feed, according to Dr. H. J. Smith, director of the Purina Mills Research Laboratory, under whose direction a complete study of the vitamin A content of various roughages and ingredients used in dairy feeds has been made. Results of this study show the need of carotene (vitamin A concentrate) in the dry cow's ration to build stronger calves, develop healthier udders, and to maintain top physical condition. Carotene is an expensive vitamin concentrate, but the by-product of carotene—puratene—is an economical way of supplying to dry cows the vitamin A they need in their ration.

On a test here at the Purina Experimental Farm, seven Guernsey cows were denied a satisfactory carotene ration for two years and, as a result, three of their calves died shortly after birth, three were saved only with the greatest difficulty, and only one was normal. On another ration containing plenty of carotene (vitamin A), thirteen Guernseys brought twelve normal calves. The only weak calf in the group died at the age of two days.

U. S. Tests in Agreement
Tests on carotene needs of dairy cows conducted at the U. S. Department of Agriculture Experiment Station, Beltsville, Maryland, are in agreement with tests made here at Purina Farm, and indicate that a thousand-pound cow should receive not less than 150 milligrams of carotene per day to insure normal calving.

Good pasture is a rich source of carotene, but when cows are not on pasture practically all the carotene intake is from the roughage part of the ration. If the roughage cows get is low in carotene, they do not get enough to support normal calving. Many roughages do not supply adequate amounts of vitamin A.

Recognizing the fact that many dairy cows are dropping weak calves or having undue trouble at calving time due to getting roughages deficient in carotene, Purina Mills recently reinforced Dry and Freshening Cow Chow with puratene, a rich vitamin A concentrate that performs the same functions as carotene.

Plenty of Vitamin A Needed
Cows fed on roughage classed as "low" or "very low" in vitamin A (crab grass hay, cottonseed hulls, peanut hay, Johnson grass hay, poor timothy hay, corn fodder, ordinary silage, or Number 3 alfalfa hay) need plenty of vitamin A in their commercial ration.

McFaddin Delivers Address to Class

College Graduates Told Intellectual Developments Awaiting

TEXARKANA — Ed. F. McFaddin, Hope, Ark., attorney and civic leader, told graduates of Texarkana College at commencement exercises Wednesday night at the Texas schools auditorium that they could make their lives as they liked them if they could translate the adversities of the world to their own good through intellectual prowess. Introduced by Superintendent H. W. Stilwell, as "a thinker capable of speaking to thinking students," McFaddin admitted to the students that the days of physical pioneering were over but said the surface of intellectuality had hardly been scratched. He described every graduation as a time for retrospection, declaring that life is as you like it, a mirror which reflects back to the individual his own ideas and thoughts. He reminded the graduates that they were going out into a nation of 10,000,000 unemployed, 3,000,000 of whom would be of their age and generation.

Wife Fixes Cross, Tired Husband

Now He's Happy—Feels Years Younger

Tonic helps cleanse the system, drives malaria out of the blood and helps give you a good physical pick-up. Nash's C. & L. Tonic is made by a Southerner, a man who knows Southern ailments, who knows what people in the South suffer from, and what Southern people should take to get permanent relief.

Money Back Guarantee

Mr. Nash guarantees every bottle of C. & L. Tonic. Go to your drug-gist right now. Get a 50c bottle of C. & L. Tonic. Tonic does not benefit you. For sale in Hope by Ward & Son.

Gangster's 'Wife'

MRS. JEWELL GRAYSON, alias Grace Goldstein. . . . She was arrested by G-men in Los Angeles with 32 other persons suspected of having been connected with the notorious Karpis-Barker gang; said she lived with Alvin Karpis as his wife until he was sent to prison for life.

He assured his listeners, however, that conditions were much worse in other nations, declaring that the principal worry in the United States was whether or not "we have enough to keep up with the Joneses."

"We are now ready to take the second step in development," the attorney said. "Up to now we have been building on the platform of physical achievement. There are no more frontiers, territories or Indians to conquer. We have reached the acme of physical accomplishments. "Have we the nerve to be the intellectual pioneers for the next hundred years that our forefathers showed as physical pioneers? We must have the vision to carry out what they started. "Specifically, there are many fields open to the youth of today. In the field of medicine, we have yet to overcome cancer, asthma, infantile paralysis, the common cold and many other illnesses. "If you have the intellectual fortitude of your forefathers, the way is open. "The world is in great need of good lawyers. A lawyer and an honest man at the present are considered two different people. Lawyers are needed who are capable of overhauling the system of taxation and wiping out technicalities which protect criminals. "In the field of pedagogy we are now at the place where we must decide whether our colleges are to be cultural or practical. If they are to be practical, we need new teachers of a new generation.

"In the field of crafts, aviation is in its infancy, in chemistry we do not yet know all of the elements; in the field of agriculture we need intelligent men and women to cope with the problem of soil conservation. "There are just as many intellectual opportunities now as there were physical opportunities a hundred years ago. "The trouble is that we are looking at the world through the periscope of people who lived one hundred years ago. The easy roads are crowded, the level roads are jammed, but way up where it is rocky the ranks are thin."

Dr. Coo's 10 essentials for the well educated person were set forth by the attorney as follows:

1. Specific training.
2. Know the language, be able to use it with readiness, accuracy and precision.
3. Be able to think and study without guidance.
4. Sufficient knowledge of nature to understand the principles upon which human happiness depends.
5. Know enough history to understand the achievements of our land.
6. Intellectual resources.
7. Broad vision.
8. Ethical attitude toward fellow-men.
9. Loyalty for important institutions and organization.
10. Reverence toward God.

An inventor has discovered that friction can be used as a substitute for domestic fuel. Now why doesn't somebody discover a substitute for domestic friction?

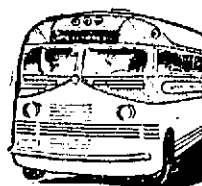

Drugs are one nation in a million these days. The signs on that country's consulate in Philadelphia were stolen a while ago, and nobody has been able to think of a reason for it yet.

A factory in California burned down the other day while two women monopolized a telephone line that should have been used for calling the fire department. That makes one factory and a large assortment of cars that were burning at the time.

Cows escaped recently from a runaway freight train in Colorado, and the funny thing is that nobody thought of the obvious solution—the one hanging on the front of the engine.

Homemakers' Exchange of Helpful Household Hints and Recipes

If you have a new canary who refuses to sing there is the possibility that the little creature is simply lonely and lacks inspiration. In such instances, canaries have been known to start singing when a whistling tea kettle is placed on the stove a few times a day and allowed to boil.

For a delicious, jiffy dessert, try Refrigerator Whip: Into 1 cup of whipping cream (whipped), fold 3/4 cup of graham cracker crumbs and 1 cup of peach or other preserves. Pile in sherberts and chill. This is a particularly suitable dessert to make up several hours, or a day in advance. And stored in the clean-washed, properly moist atmosphere of a modern air-conditioned refrigerator, this dessert will retain all its delicate flavor and fluffiness until serving time.

Refreshments at a card party can be served with lightning speed by the use of clever table trays or covers that are easily and inexpensively made. Each tray is the size of the card table top, and is made of shell-lacked composition board, with a one-inch frame or "apron" that fits over the table. Handles are placed on opposite side.

Before the guests arrive each tray is spread with a cloth and completely set with a service for four. Plates of cake and sandwiches, covered with damp cloths, are even put on. Perishable foods are in the refrigerator, all ready to serve. Each tray is then quickly carried in and all the guests are served at once.

Formula for Peace

TOWNSHIRE, England—(AP)—This will give you an idea of how seriously the British take their cricket: "Had Hitler and Mussolini been cricketers," said Sir Frances Lacey, secretary of the Marylebone Cricket club, in a recent speech here, "I do not think we should have had all this trouble that is going on in Europe today."

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisons waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.
